MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE.

The Convicted Prisoner Loses His Iron Merve-Awful Words Spoken by the Fereman of the Jury Utterly Unman Him-Sympathy Expressed for his Aged Father-Odd Request of the Jurymen.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.-Roland Burn ham Molineux was found guilty of murder in the first degree at 11 o'clock last night. Unless a higher court reelectric chair for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, who was killed by poison sent to Harry S. Cornish.

Molineux, although he had been pre pared in a measure for the verdict by his lawyer, Bartow S. Weeks, almost fainted when his doom was pronounced He stood up straght as of old to face the jury, but as the words, "guilty of murder in the first degree," were pro-nounced he gasped and fell back into his chair. The iron nerve which he had displayed had given away at last. The Verdict Unexpected.

The verdict, which comes as the clos ing chapter in the greatest murder drama of recent years, was in a meas ure unexpected. The general belief was that the jury, if it did not acquit, would Twice during the evening the jury men had asked for instructions from the recorder for certain exhibits in svidence. But just before the clock struck whisper ran through the court room that a verdict had been reached, and a moment later the jurymen filed in and took their seats. The recorder and the prisoner entered by different doors and took their seats. Molineux was white with suspense and fear, but still he strove to maintain his composure and sat erect.

The recorder, speaking in low, meas ured tones, enjoined the strictest si-lence. The hush was intense and painful. Then the clerk asked the usual question of the foreman and his fellows. It ran according to the usual

Announcement of the Verdict.

Molineux had risen. He held his shoulders back and stood erect. His gaze was fixed upon the foreman. "Guilty of murder in the first de said Foreman Martin.

Molineux's knees seemed to give way His face grew whiter than it had been which seemed scarcely possible. He sank down in his chair. Many thought he was fainting, but he was not. this, his bitterest hour, he strove again to pull himself together, and succeeded

A mighty murmur ran through the court room, then there was deep silence for a moment. The crowd took a mighty breath as one man, and exhaled it in a great sigh. Molineux was guilty. Someone opened the private door and whispered the news to the crowd that packed the corridors outside, and the cry went up "Gullty." From floor to floor of the great, gloomy building the cry resounded. In a moment it was carried out into the street, and in a moment more telegraph and telephone carried it from one end of the city to the other and far across the country, which had watched and puzzled over this greatest of modern murder mysteries, now a mystery no longer.

Last Look of Defiance.

As Molineux went out he looked de fantly at the spectators. After he had disappeared through the door Recorder Goff turned to the jurors and thanked them for doing such faithful public service and for attending so carefully to the details. The recorder said that he had understood that they had made a request to keep the photographic folio of the handwriting experts. This he said was a very reasonable sequel, and he was glad to grant it.

Recorder Goff continued: "There is one thing I want to tell you. The law does not forbid you to tell what took place in the jury room, but in accordance with the dignity of the proceedings I would request that if anyone should ask you about what took place in your deliberations you say nothing about it. When a juror has said the about it. When a juror has said the word that makes up his verdict that is sufficient."

Foreman Martin then said: "Your U. S. new 4s registered. 134 honor, if you please, we have agreed among ourselves that we will say nothing about our deliberations to any Sympathy for the General.

At this point George Gordon Battle who had been absent from the build ing when the verdict was announced place beside Mr. Weeks. His face was very white. He had heard the news of the verdict from the crowd as h entered the court' room. He looked a General Molineux and took his hand but was unable to say a word.

Mr. Weeks then repeated the reques concerning General Molineux, asking that the father be allowed to go to his As Mr. Weeks uttered the the old father stood up and looked appealingly at the recorder. His mouth was drawn and his eyes suffused with tears. The recorder said: "The general can go to see the defendant."

"General," he continued, "turning to the old warrior, "take the door at the rear of the court room. That is the quickest way out."

The general bowed slightly and turned away. Mr. Weeks, Mr Battle and Mr. Carvalho accompanied the general, and the four walked quietly out of the court room, followed by the gaze of every one present. General Molincux walked with head erect, and there was an audible murmur of admiration

It is said the trial cost $200,000.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10. - The move ment of prices on the stock exchange had little significance to-day, as operhad little significance to-day, as operations were largely confined to the closing up of contracts by the professional element. There was a continuation of realising sales. The rally in the market after the bank statement appeared made it evident that part of the selining had been for short account, in anticipation of an unfavorable statement. The rally did not mean necessarily that the statement was considered favorable, but simply that the bears desired to cover their short contracts before the two holidays pending. There was rather acute weakness at times in St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Western Union, Burlington and Sugar.
